

Concert facilities needed for Cal Poly

by Nancy Lewis
Special to the Daily

The ASI Concert Committee is still without a facility in which to hold concerts, and the chance to sign performers to a concert at Cal Poly before June is slipping away.

The Concert Committee, a part of the ASI Program Board, has been without a facility to hold concerts since October when Jim Railey, Physical Education department head, refused to allow any more concerts in the gymnasium until further guidelines of gymnasium procedures could be drawn up.

The Concert Committee chaired by Jerry Morales and Railey along with Harry Busselen, the dean of the School of Human Development and Education, have come up with guidelines acceptable to the three of them, but are waiting for approval from the university's Facility Use Committee.

The Facility Use Committee is a standing committee chaired by Provost Tomlinson Fort, Jr. Its function is to interpret regulations concerning the use of campus facilities. The group only meets on call as issues arise, according to Morales.

Morales said he and the rest of the Concert Committee members have been waiting two weeks for the Facility Use Committee to make a general endorsement of the new guidelines for concert procedures, and will probably wait another week while the members of the Facility Use Committee respond to a proposal Fort sent to each of the members.

If the committee members generally agree to the new guidelines, the Concert Committee can bid on performers for possible concerts on campus spring quarter, according to Morales.

The situation is frustrating for the 105-member Concert Committee because until the committee has a guaranteed facility to use, it cannot enter any contracts with a performing group, Morales said.

"We won't even consider bidding, which means Concerts is at a standstill," remarked Morales. "It's very frustrating for the committee because we haven't been able to do anything about concerts. As a result we're going to lose out on a lot of acts."

Morales said the performers that are available before June have been finalizing their tour dates over the past two weeks. As a consequence, Cal Poly's chance of contracting one of these acts is getting slimmer as they wait for the Facility Use Committee to make a decision.

Six more instructors arrested in latest of Diablo protests

by Jesse Chavarria
Staff Writer

Eleven members of Concerned Cal Poly Faculty, Staff and Friends were arrested Saturday as approximately 1,000 demonstrators protested against the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant.

More than 60 arrests were made over the weekend in the largest rally at Avila Beach since Jan. 13 of this year.

Arraignments are scheduled for today at 2 p.m. at the Veteran's Memorial Hall. The eleven members are charged with trespassing and refusal to disperse.

Paul Wolff, acting as a spokesman for the group, explained that those arrested would likely be given the choice of paying a fine of $135 or spending four days in jail. They are currently being held in the San Luis Obispo County Jail.

"None of the people in the group will pay the fine," said Wolff. "Most of the group will plead not guilty and try and use the defense of necessity."

Defense of necessity is where a person commits a crime in order to prevent a greater crime, said Wolff. He explained that this defense has never been allowed in a civil disobedience case but would set an important precedent if it were allowed.

Each person is allowed to make a statement to the court during the arraignments, said Wolff.

"They should be interesting especially to students," he added.

Those faculty members arrested are: William Clark, mechanical engineering; David Englund, child development; Jim Hauser, physics; Richard Kransdorf, political science; Bette Tryon, child development; and Walter Tryon, landscape architecture.

The people in the group that represent staff and friends are: Rich Hubbard, Randy Rutton, Joanna Verhaard, and Gloria Zimmerman. Two Cal Poly students also arrested are Lola Arnold, child development major, and a student that refused to give his name, but was not associated with the group.

Jim Hauser is the only faculty member that was arrested at both the Jan. 13 protest and last weekend according to Wolff.

This most recent protest was spurred by the fact that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is holding hearings on whether or not to grant Diablo Canyon a low-level testing license.

Student senators to decide tonight on peace resolution

by John Bachman
Staff Writer

The Student Senate tonight is voting on a Peace Package which would send a message to the California Legislature that Cal Poly students support the Legislature's peace resolution.

If the Student Senate passes the Peace Package said Julie Clayton, author of the resolution and senator from Human Development and Education, it would send a letter to San Luis Obispo's representatives that 16,000 students support the Legislature's resolution.

The Legislature's resolution, if passed, would send a message to the United States Senate urging them to call for the immediate halt to the deployment of nuclear weapons.

The resolution also calls for a letter to be sent to Congress and the President of the United States urging them to increase peace making efforts and dialogue in order to decrease United States/Soviet Union tension.

One reason for her resolution was to increase the knowledge of Student Senators, she said. "My underlying purpose is to increase the awareness of the Student Senate, councils and clubs."

When a resolution or bill is introduced she said, the senate, the student councils and clubs must study the proposal and this increases their awareness of the social issues.

Many senators have been critical of resolutions which do not directly relate to education, calling for the senate to address issues which only affect students' education.

"I don't think my resolution will pass," said Clayton. "Because there is a lot of confusion among Student Senators as to their roles as senators and citizens of the United States."

Clayton said that she will continue to introduce bills and resolutions which are of great importance to Cal Poly students as citizens of the United States.

Actions say more than words

It's a SLO world

by John Kohlsaatt

The United States and the Soviet Union are two behemoths in a faceoff.

We are like two old stags. Neither of us wants to fight but neither wants to back down either. We are at an impasse, that has lasted for decades and the tension is not abating.

Efforts have been made in the past to try to relieve some of that tension. Opportunities have occasionally arisen in which we had a chance to better relations with each other. We took advantage of some. On other occasions we blew it.

We have another of those opportunities now. The death of the president of the Soviet Union resulted in the appointment of a new Soviet leader, Konstantin U. Chernenko.

The late Yuri V. Andropov, for whatever reasons, was either unable or unwilling to negotiate much with the United States. The new leader comes from a different element of the Soviet top echelon and it is hoped by Washington that he will be more willing to cooperate in achieving some progress toward peace.

Washington can talk all it wants, but it is actions that count. The Soviets will be watching us more narrowly than ever during this time of transition. How interested they are in talking with the United States will hinge on what they see us saying and doing in the international theater.

It is up to us to keep our noses clean. President Reagan has indicated a desire to improve ties between our nation and the USSR. But words don't carry much weight in the Soviet Union. They don't trust us any more than we trust them. It is what we do that counts.

Our government in Washington needs to decide whether it is more important to scurry around the world interfering in this revolution or that civil war, ship arms to Western Europe, or to back off and demonstrate our seriousness in wanting to discuss peace.

We do not need to hamstring our defenses to show the Russians we mean business. But they will take us much more seriously if President Reagan shows them, not just tells them, that America wants to achieve a mutually acceptable peaceful relationship with the Soviet Union.

Ignorant pen calls Student Senate ASInine

Editor:

As Student Senators from the School of Human Development and Education we wish to address your Feb. 8, 1984 Opinion page calling us ASInine. To begin with, let us set the record straight. The Editorial Board stated that "...only one fourth of the 24 senators have even introduced bills. The remaining bills were authored by ASI officers, who cannot even vote on them." You are correct in stating that a small percentage of senators have introduced bills. The majority of business that is conducted at the senate meetings is in the form of resolutions and not bills. We might suggest that you know the difference between the two before you go writing with an "ignorant" pen.

As far as the senate evaluation form is concerned, we agree with the Editorial Board. It was ASInine. I, Julie Clayton, along with half the other senators felt that filling out the evaluation form would not be a "worthwhile investment of our time."

The Daily also suggests that "perhaps student senators need to have their qualifications checked before they are even allowed to run for office." The point is well taken but what type of qualifications are you addressing? Student senators are elected from their respective schools.

As far as goals being set; we can only speak for ourselves. I feel that I have obtained many of my goals as an ASI Student Senator. My foremost goal was to critically analyze the ASI Finance Committee's funding of events at Cal Poly. I have spoken out on ASI funds being allocated to put on a "tailgate" party and also ASI funds spent to fly not one but two ASI officers to the East Coast for lobbying purposes.

My fellow student senator, Donna Taniguchi, feels that the objective that she has wanted to address was that of increasing the awareness of our student body on the current issues being dealt with. One important approach is communicating this to students through the student councils.

We have also set up a "meet your ASI Senator" Day. During this day, we met with our constituents and passed out information on such things as the new add/drop policy and voter registration.

I have, along with the help of the Student Senate, surveyed 600 Cal Poly students in order to find out how they would like to see their commencement ceremony run. From the results of the survey, I introduced and had passed a resolution reflecting the majority's opinion.

Finally, I have spent a day at our State Capitol lobbying for an increase in funding for the California State University System's budget. The list goes on and on but perhaps we would not need to waste the ink on this page if the Editorial Board had cared enough to sit in on one of our many senate meetings in order to find out what we were up to.

The Student Senate meets for a formal meeting every Wednesday night from 7 p.m. on. I can recall one meeting in which the Student Senate sat from 7 p.m. til midnight discussing pertinent issues that would affect the Cal Poly student body. We meet (informally) every Monday night to debate resolutions and bills before they are brought to the Wednesday night meeting. We also attend our school council meetings and sit on various standing committees such as: Instructionally Related Activities Board (which extends fund to the Mustang Daily), Codes and Bylaws and the Academic Committee.

What does this all add up to? Roughly, 10 to 20 hours of voluntary service to the ASI. What do we receive in return? A slap in the face from the Editorial Board of the Mustang Daily!

Julie Clayton
Donna Taniguchi

Editors note:

The Mustang Daily is completely self-sufficient and is supported only by those revenues it generates in advertising. None of its funding comes from IRA, as erroneously stated in the above letter.

And once again you have missed the point of the editorial. Speaking out against an action is fine and dandy, but what specific actions (resolutions do not count — they're merely recommendations) has the Student Senate accomplished which has directly affected the student body of Cal Poly?

Past concert problems cause request for change

The group X was one of few this year able to perform in the Cal Poly main gym.

Mustang Daily — Fritz Voss

The bands that are still available for possible concerts before June include John Cougar, Elvis Costello, Roy Orbison, .38 Special and U2, said Morales.

No more concerts have been held in the gym since October when Railey put a halt to them. Railey's concern came after the Motels and X concerts.

These concerts didn't cause specific problems, but according to Morales, it was the last straw for Railey in dealing with concerts over the years. "He got to a point where he had to stop and evaluate the situation," said Morales.

"There were some concerns he had that we didn't know were causing problems," said Morales. The biggest issue was the use of the gym floor.

In the past, the Concert Committee has tried to control the entry of people wearing hard-soled shoes on the floor, the amount of smoking and the abuse of the gym floor. "However with 3,000 people in there with a sold-out concert, it's almost inevitable someone will light up a cigarette," said Morales.

Railey feels the facility was built as a physical education area and the use of the facility should be for those purposes. "The gym was not built for concerts, it was built for participatory activities," he said.

But the Concert Committee still needs a facility, said Morales. "We understand it is a privilege to be able to use it, and we feel we can work together since we don't have one to use," he said.

One of Railey's biggest complaints was a gouge in the wooden floor that was taken out when the stage platform was moved in for the Motels concert.

"The gouge is there forever, because we can't sand it out," said Railey.

To protect the floor in the future, guidelines state a plastic floor covering will be laid across the floor from bleacher to bleacher for all sit down concerts.

Shoe checks will also be more strictly enforced to prevent hard-soled shoes, and smoking, food and drink will be forbidden in the gym.

Another problem is caused by the lobby doors being blocked during concerts, said Railey. Previously, the

Political science major new Poly Royal queen

by Margarita Mills

Staff Writer

The first major event of Poly Royal concluded with the announcement of this year's queen and her court of four princesses.

Rebecca Olshausen, a junior political science major, was chosen from a field of 36 contestants representing various campus organizations to act as the official spokesperson for Poly Royal.

The new queen, sponsored by College Republicans, will work with four princesses, Karen Gustafson from Theta Chi, Lauren Shanahan from National Agricultural Marketing Association, Nancy Ortman from the Ornamental Horticulture Club, and Angela Robledo from the Economics Club, to promote Cal Poly and Poly Royal through radio and television promotions, newspaper advertisements, and appearances.

Each entrant was required to have at least junior status, be in her second quarter at Cal Poly and be taking at least 12 units with a minimum 2.2 grade point average.

The 36 girls were given a list of six questions two weeks prior to the pageant about Poly Royal and their school activities so they could do the necessary research and have time to think about each question.

Master of Ceremonies Monte Mills, who returned as host from two years ago, asked each contestant one of the six questions.

Ten finalists were chosen by seven judges on the basis of poise, appearance, speaking ability and presentation of ideas.

The remaining five finalists were Vicki Pitts, Margaret Barrett, Lisa Scanlin, Yvonne Barber and Desiree Althuisen.

The 10 finalists were then sent backstage and asked to respond to a spontaneous question: "What aspect of your personality has been enhanced since you've been at Cal Poly?"

Olshausen was crowned by the 1983 Poly Royal Queen, Adrienne Lefebvre.

Olshausen's duties will include in addition to radio and television appearances will be to attend luncheons, go on a tour of other campuses, participate in the Poly Royal parade, speak at opening ceremonies and finally to be available at all Poly Royal events. Morton said that although the bulk of the new queen's duties will be during spring quarter, her reign will continue through the year until next Poly Royal. Although Olshausen was crowned Monday night, she will make her formal introduction to the student body at the Poly Royal Coronation Ball April 21.

Ag Forum addresses 'hidden costs' of agriculture

by Margie Cooper
Staff Writer

Cancer-linked food products and the contamination of our drinking water are the hidden costs associated with America's present system of agriculture, members of Cal Poly's Ag Forum said Friday.

Club members recently attended a three-day ecological farming conference to learn alternative methods of agricultural farming to help offset some of those hidden costs.

Agricultural systems appear economically profitable today, members said because the externalities aren't being figured into the final cost.

Like nature, the costs are cyclical. Farms are sprayed with pesticides and insecticides which in turn leach into the soil with winter rains. Man consumes animals that have eaten chemically treated grasses. The end result is contamination of the drinking water and a higher incidence of cancer in humans.

Of recent concern is the present issue of EDB (ethylene dibromide), a fumigant sprayed on wheat products that laboratory tests have shown cause cancer in mice and rats.

"As a club, we support and encourage sustainable agriculture," said Dan Stein a graduate student. "We want an agricultural system that is based on more ecological principles."

Growers can find alternative practices that are more compatible with our ecosystem than the use of insecticides, fumigants and other oil derived products as a basis for production, he said.

Jerry Harbinson, a graduate student said that every time an oil shortage occurs, the cost of fertilizer skyrockets, which in turn brings up the cost of food.

"The price of lettuce on your table shouldn't be dependent on a barrel of oil," he said.

Ag Forum believes big farms have never been assessed on the hidden costs and support taxing farmers for the mismanagement of farm land.

"Maybe if we tax the farmers for soil loss, we could bring a balance between the amount of production and the way the land is treated," Stein said.

The group feels the only way to achieve high productivity is to farm organically. Organic farms will preserve the land and sustain it for future generations.

Throughout the conference, groups associated with ecological agriculture spoke about their activities and discussed major problems facing the future of agriculture.

Dr. Wes Jackson, director of the Land Institute in Salina, Kansas said that 99% of all university research supports capital intensive agriculture with an emphasis on energy rather than ecology.

Jackson said research money is coming from chemical companies so that "energy inputs have replaced ecological mechanisms."

He feels the school of agriculture and biological science need to break traditional patterns of specialization and merge together their research data from both fields to improve the problems in agriculture.

Stein noted that sustainable agriculture is still in its infancy, with basic research just being started.

In order for it to work, members believe, a greater understanding and cooperation with all life forces needs to exist.

People need to develop farms as small ecosystems Stein said. Where animal manure can be used to fertilize soil which feeds the animals. To prevent erosion and a loss of nutrients, crops can be rotated. Farmers can use smaller tractors to get the job done and conserve fuel.

Ag Forum will be discussing sustainable agriculture at their next meeting at 11 a.m. on Thursday, Feb. 23, in room 111 at the Ag Building.

UCSB research shuttle up for Baker's approval

A proposal up for approval by President Baker and the Academic Senate would make it possible for Cal Poly researchers to use the library resources at the University of California Santa Barbara.

Under the terms of the proposal a free shuttle would be provided between the two universities for people who meet researcher qualifications. Library officials would determine who meets the requirements.

According to Lynne Gamble, Academic Senate long range planning committee chairman, a researcher could be faculty, staff or students working on special assignments.

The proposal encourages faculty to pursue research activities and notes that the nearest large research center is at UCSB.

Gamble said that Cal Poly officials would not necessarily have to buy a new vehicle. "Administrators could set up a shuttle with a state car or van," she explained.

Gamble added that the shuttle should operate between normal working hours, possible leaving Poly at 7 a.m. and returning by 5 p.m.

However, schedules could be flexible, said Gamble. If researchers made prior arrangements for living quarters, researchers could take advantage of UC Santa Barbara's library for more than a day.

The academic senate is expected to vote on the library shuttle proposal at its next meeting, March 6. According to Academic Senate chairman Jim Simmons, the proposal appeared to have met senate members' approval.

Women even CCAA record

by Shari Ewing
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly women's basketball team had the home crowd on its feet at the end of Thursday night's game against Cal State Los Angeles.

Senior guard Kelly Ulrich provided the drama when she dropped in a 10-footer with two seconds left on the clock to win the game, 68-66.

"I thought there was one second on the clock," said Ulrich. "I just kind of threw it. I knew it had to go in."

Chris Hester put the first point on the board for the Mustangs with a free throw, followed by two buckets from Sue Farmer.

Despite top-scorer Terrie MacDonald's 13 consecutive points (of a game-high 27 points) Cal Poly trailed the Golden Eagles 35-38, at the half.

The second half had more back-and-forth court action than a tennis match, when both teams alternated taking the lead, although never building up anything substantial.

With 53 seconds left on the clock and the score tied at 64-64, the Lady Mustangs called a time-out. When the team hit the court, the rally began again, with Sherrie Atteberry pulling down a rebound and feeding the ball to center Nancy Hosken for two points.

Cal State LA's guard from down under, Jann Martin, contributed two points to tie the score again at 66-66. The famous Ulrich shot put another CCAA game in the win column for the Mustangs.

"I'm happy we won," said Hester. "As soon as Kelly put up the shot I knew we'd won. She (Ulrich) was confident."

Cal Poly extended its winning ways when it defeated Cal State Northridge, 77-59, Saturday night.

Ulrich led the Mustang scoring with a game-high 20 points. MacDonald and Atteberry also scored in double-digits, with 18 and 14 points respectively. Center Hosken pulled down 10 rebounds.

The Matadors were led by top-scorer Darleen Branigan (17 points) and Rene Loch (15 points). Forward Dianna Ayala pulled down nine caroms, to lead her team in that department.

The Lady Mustangs are now 4-4 in conference play. Their next game will be Thursday against Chapman in Orange. The team returns home Saturday to play against Cal State Dominguez Hills. The game will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Poly sinks Pacific

by Kim Foster
Staff Writer

On a cold, windy Saturday afternoon, the Cal Poly women's swim team finished their dual meet season undefeated, drowning the University of Pacific, 64-41.

Senior All-American Ann Stier led the Mustangs with three victories, two of which qualified her for the nationals to be held in New York on March 7. Stier broke the barrier in the 500 free (5:06.35) and the 400 individual medley (4:44.29). She also won the 100 fly with a time of 1:01.90.

"Ann had some good swims," said coach Duane McRoy. "She gutted out the 500 for a great time."

Teammate Anne Gatlin, who has already qualified for nationals in three events and two relays, won the 100 back with a time of 1:04.42, and broke the 30-second barrier in the 50 back (29.65) in an exhibition swim.

Other individual winners for the Mustangs included: JoanMary Laubacher, 50 free (25.79); Susan Watt, 100 free (56.19); Nancy Stern, 200 Breast (2:33.50); and Jennifer Shofield, 200 free (2:12.89).

In diving, Donna McRoy fought off the bad weather to qualify for nationals on the one-meter board with a total of 363 points.

With nationals less than a month away, the Mustangs already have eight girls qualified to compete in a total of 18 events.

The Mustangs have also attained standards in the 400 medley relays and 800 free relays, but their 200 free, and 200 medley relays have yet to qualify. The last chance to make the trip to New York will be in two weeks in a meet to be held in the USC Olympic pool.

Lacrosse club looking to upset Santa Barbara

Good memories won't remain for the Cal Poly lacrosse club after last weekend's loss of UC Berkeley. After an unexplained hour delay, the opposing Berkeley team swept through San Luis, leaving with a decisive 10-3 victory.

Kendall Pearson, club president, described the game as slow moving, unemotional and "just a crummy situation."

"By the time Berkeley showed, we had lost any competitive edge," said Pearson. "But by next game..."

This weekend the club will try to offset the cloudy beginning with a win over UC Santa Barbara, last year's state champions. The Saturday game will start at 1:00 in the Mustang Stadium. Admission is free.

Poly tumblers entertain home crowd with victory

Mustang Daily—Janet Lehman

Winning the all-around competition, freshman Janet Lehman helped the Cal Poly gymnastics team to a win at home last weekend against three other schools.

by Kathy Messinger

Staff Writer

The Cal Poly women's gymnastics team outdueled their competition to win their first home meet last weekend with their highest score of the year in front of a capacity crowd at Crandall Gym.

Poly's team score of 164.65 tops their previous best score of this season by four points. Cal Poly Pomona was second with 156.5 points, Southern Utah State was third with 136.3, and San Francisco State was fourth with 81.25.

"The girls were great. This was their best meet—they were really working as a team," said coach Tim Rivera. "This is the first time we have had a full team (six girls) on each event."

In the all-around event Poly outshined the competition. Jana Lehman, freshman, placed first with her highest all-around score this season, with a 34.1. Kazumi Norimoto, senior, who competed in the all-around for the first time this season by adding a floor routine was second with a score of 33.45 and Lisa McAllister tied for third with a score of 32.7.

Also in the all-around were Cathy Pagani with a score of 30.25 and Denise Stretch with a score of 29.65.

Poly's first event of the evening, the vault, was won by Norimoto with a score of 8.4, Teryl Theis was second with an 8.35, Lehman was third with an 8.3 and McAllister was fourth with an 8.25.

Other scores on the vault were, Stretch with a 7.7 and Pagani with a 7.3.

On the uneven parallel bars McAllister won the event with a score of 8.75, Lehman was second with a score of 8.7 and Norimoto was fourth with an 8.5.

Theis scored an 8.15 on the bars, Stretch scored a 7.5 and Pagani scored a 6.2.

Despite a fall during warm-ups before the meet, in which Norimoto bruised her shoulder falling off of the bars, she still held on to do well in the meet.

The girls improved on their form, I was impressed. They all stuck their landings," said Rivera. "Two tenths of a point is taken off for each extra step on a landing, to many can really hurt the team as well as individual scores," said Rivera.

On the beam, Poly took a clean sweep of the top three places. Pagani was first with an 8.6, Norimoto was second with an 8.5 and Lehman was third with an 8.3.

Other scores were Pam Dickie with a 7.75, McAllister with a 7.35 and Stretch with a 6.9.

Pagani was the only Poly gymnast not to fall off of the beam during her routine. "Five-tenths of a point is taken off for every fall, this can take a 9 point routine down to a 7.5 with just three falls," said Rivera.

"The routines were very clean, everyone was solid. That's why the falls didn't hurt the scores as much as they could have," said Rivera.

On the floor exercise Lehman had the highest score given out on any event, she was first with a score of 8.85, tumbling to the sound of Beethoven's Fifth symphony. McAllister was third with an 8.35 despite an unfortunate fall on the last move of her first tumbling run.

Theis had a score of 8.2 on the floor, Pagani scored an 8.15, Norimoto scored an 8.05 and Stretch scored a 7.45.

Norimoto needed an all-around score for regionals, the routine she did was put together just last week during practice.

"This was a real high energy meet, by my doing a floor routine we added assurance in our final team score for the floor," said Norimoto. "This was the best meet ever. We really worked together as a team," agreed Lehman and Pagani.

The next home meet for Poly is March 3, and the girls all agreed that this was the best audience that they had competed in front of all season.
